Glink

PRODUCT GUIDE · OCTOBER 2026

How Glink works.

The UGC platform that matches your brief to the right creators, checks every video before you see it, and pays for real results.

1 Glink in one page
2 A campaign, start to finish
3 How creators are matched
4 The quality check
5 Getting paid
6 Direct hire or contest
7 Teams, accounts and updates
8 Try it, and what's next

1 · GLINK IN ONE PAGE

One brief in. Better videos out.

Brands describe what they need once. Glink finds the creators most likely to deliver it, keeps quality high before anything reaches review, and learns from every result so the next campaign starts smarter.

FOR BRANDS

Stop sifting through applications.

- Write one brief: your goal, the angle, the opening line, what to say and what to avoid, your budget and a deadline.
- Get a ranked list of creators, each with a plain reason why they fit.
- Review videos that have already been checked against your brief.
- Pay only for work you approve — and bonuses only when an ad wins.

FOR CREATORS

Get matched, not ignored.

- Receive campaigns that suit what you're good at — no long applications.
- Follow a clear brief with a deadline, an opening line and do's and don'ts.
- Check your video before you submit, so there are fewer re-shoots.
- Get paid to your bank when it's approved, plus a bonus when your ad performs. Always free to join.

The loop

Brief the brand describes it → Match the right creators → Create and check the video → Review & pay on approval → Learn from the results

Every result feeds back in, so each round of matching is better than the last.

What makes Glink different

✦ Strengths, not one score. Creators are known for what they're good at — grabbing attention, keeping viewers watching, driving sales, delivering on time.

? Every match explained. You see why a creator was suggested, and anything to keep an eye on.

✓ Quality before review. Problems are caught before you spend time watching.

$ Money follows results. Budgets are held safely, fees release on approval and bonuses when an ad wins.

2 · A CAMPAIGN, START TO FINISH

From brief to bonus in eight steps.

Both sides see each step the moment it happens — no chasing emails.

1

The brand launches a campaign

A short four-step setup: the basics, the creative brief, the budget and creators, then a final review. The whole budget, including possible bonuses, is set aside safely so creators know the money is there. Every campaign has a submission deadline.

2

Glink finds the creators

Every creator is ranked for this campaign. The brand can let Glink invite the strongest matches automatically, pick creators by hand, or open it up as a contest.

3

Creators say yes or no

A creator sees the campaign, the pay and why they were matched. Accepting unlocks the full brief. If someone declines, the next best creator is invited automatically.

4

The creator films and checks

They upload the video and Glink checks it against the brief straight away. Anything that's off can be fixed and re-uploaded before it's sent.

5

The brand reviews

The brand watches the video with any problems marked at the exact moment they happen. They can approve, ask for changes with notes, or reject.

6

The creator gets paid

Approval releases the fee to the creator. Three days later it's ready to withdraw to their bank.

7

Results come in – and bonuses

The brand adds how the ad performed. If it beats the target within 14 days, it's marked a winning ad and the bonus is paid automatically.

8

The campaign wraps up

Once every video is decided, any unused budget goes back to the brand. What worked is remembered for next time.

Every advert has a timeline.
For example: brief sent → draft due → final due → go live. One date is the deadline creators submit against.

3 · HOW CREATORS ARE MATCHED

The right creator for this brief.

Each creator gets a match score from 0 to 99 for every campaign. It isn't a popularity contest — it looks at whether this person is likely to deliver this particular brief.

WHAT GLINK LOOKS AT	IN PLAIN WORDS
1 Strengths for your goal	If you want sales, creators who drive sales count most. If you want awareness, creators who stop the scroll count most.
2 Category	Do they make content in your category — or a close one?
3 Style	Have they done well with the kind of video you've asked for, such as a confession, testimonial or demo?
4 Reliability	Do they deliver on time?
5 Market	Are they in, or close to, the audience you're targeting?
6 Budget	Does their usual rate fit what you're offering?
7 Proven results	Have their approved videos in this category performed well?
8 History with you	Have they already delivered good work for your brand?

Who gets invited

- ✓ Creators who are unavailable, or who charge far more than your fee, aren't suggested.
- ✓ With automatic invites, only strong matches are invited, up to the number you asked for.
- ✓ Brands always see the top reasons for each match, and the weakest point as "Watch: …".

It gets smarter with every ad

A creator's strengths start from their profile and move towards what their ads actually achieve. One lucky video can't swing their score — a consistent track record does. So the more campaigns run, the better the matches get.

Example. Sofia, a licensed esthetician in Spain, is a 77% match for a UK skincare campaign testing new content. She keeps viewers watching, makes skincare content and is reliable. Her market is close to the UK audience and her rate is just above the fee. She's new to the brand, so there's no shared history yet.

4 · THE QUALITY CHECK

Every video is checked before you see it.

We call it the pre-flight check. It compares each video with the brief, so brands review fewer videos that miss the mark and creators re-shoot less. If something can't be confirmed automatically, it's flagged for a person to look at — Glink never guesses.

1

The video itself

Is it the right length, shape (for example vertical 9:16) and quality, in a format the brand can use?

2

What's said

Does the creator say the must-say lines, like "it's fragrance-free", and avoid banned words like "miracle" or medical claims?

3

What's shown

With the optional AI check, Glink also looks at the picture — for example, is the product's texture shown?

RESULT	WHAT IT MEANS
✓ Passed	Matches the brief.
✕ Needs fixing	Breaks the brief. It comes with a tip on how to fix it and, where possible, the exact moment in the video.
? Check by eye	Couldn't be confirmed automatically, so a person should take a quick look.

- ✓ Creators can fix and re-upload as often as they like before submitting — or submit anyway and let the brand decide.
- ✓ Brands see the same list, an overall "brief match" score and a one-line summary.
- ✓ Problems appear as red markers on the video's timeline; clicking one jumps straight to that moment.

5 · GETTING PAID

Money that follows results.

Brands pay by card and creators are paid to their bank, both through Stripe, a leading payments company. Brands only pay for work they approve, and creators know the money is there before they start.

Wallet the brand pays by card → campaign launches → Held for this campaign → video approved → Pending for 3 days → 3 days later → Ready to withdraw → creator withdraws → Paid to their bank

Anything not used returns to the brand's wallet when the campaign ends.

WHEN	WHAT HAPPENS TO THE MONEY
A brand adds funds	They pay by card on Stripe's secure page, and their wallet updates as soon as the payment is confirmed.
A campaign launches	The full budget, including possible bonuses, is set aside from the wallet. A campaign can't launch without enough funds.
A video is approved	The creator's fee is released to them, and is ready to withdraw three days later.
An ad wins	If the ad beats the brand's click-through target (1.8% unless the brand sets another) within 14 days of approval, the bonus is paid automatically and both sides are told.
A creator withdraws	Everything ready is sent to their bank. Creators connect their bank once, on Stripe's secure page — Glink never sees their bank details.
A contest ends	The brand picks 1st, 2nd and 3rd place, and each prize goes to its winner.
The campaign ends	Unused budget returns to the brand. Bonus money is kept until each video's 14-day window has closed, then returned if it wasn't earned.

Bonus example

A confession-style video beats the target.

The ad reaches a 2.41% click-through against a 1.8% target, so the creator's $150 bonus is paid on top of their $380 fee — without anyone having to chase it.

6 · DIRECT HIRE OR CONTEST

Three ways to find your creators.

Every campaign picks one. All three use the same brief, timeline and quality check.

	AUTOMATIC INVITES	HAND-PICK	OPEN CONTEST
Who takes part	The strongest matches, invited for you	Creators you choose to invite	Anyone who wants to enter
How they're paid	A fee per approved video, plus a bonus if it wins	A fee per approved video, plus a bonus if it wins	Prizes for the winners only
What you decide	Approve, ask for changes or reject	Approve, ask for changes or reject	Turn down entries, then pick winners after the deadline
Best for	Speed and reliability	When you have specific creators in mind	Simple ideas anyone can film, and finding new talent

Contests have a timeline too. For example: contest opens → submissions close → winners announced → go live. Winners can be picked once submissions close, and brands only pay the prizes.

7 · TEAMS, ACCOUNTS AND UPDATES

Built for the whole team.

Brands can bring in their team, each person with the right level of access. Creators and brands can sign up with email or their Google, Apple or Facebook account.

ROLE	CAN	CAN'T
Owner	Everything, including adding funds and managing the team	—
Manager	Launch campaigns, invite creators, review and approve videos, add results, pick contest winners	Add funds or manage the team
Reviewer	Review videos, approve, ask for changes or reject	Spend money or launch campaigns

Your account

- Choose brand or creator when you sign up, then set up your brand or profile in a minute.
- Teammates you invite get an email, and join automatically when they sign up with that address.
- One login can work on both sides — switch in Settings.
- Forgot your password? We email you a reset link that lasts one hour and signs you out everywhere else.
- Light, dark or match your device — your choice.

Everything stays in sync

When a creator accepts, submits or gets paid — or a brand reviews — the other side sees it straight away, without refreshing. A brand watching its creator list sees "Accepted" the moment it happens.

Notifications, with an unread count, cover new matches, submissions, change requests, approvals, payments, bonuses, prizes and finished campaigns.

Your data stays yours. Brands only see their own campaigns, videos and money. Creators only see their own matches, videos and earnings. A video can only be watched by the creator who made it and the brand it was made for.

8 · TRY IT, AND WHAT'S NEXT

See it for yourself.

The demo comes with a sample brand, Lumen Skin, and four creators, so you can walk through a whole campaign from both sides. Every demo account uses the password demo1234.

LOG IN AS	TO SEE
alex@lumenskin.com	The brand owner — live campaigns, two videos waiting for review and an open contest
sam@lumenskin.com	A reviewer — can approve videos but can't spend maya@example.com	A creator with a track record, a winning video, a new match and a video to make
sofia@, priya@, leo@example.com	Other creators, in skincare, home routines and pets

Coming next

Now live
Card payments for brands, bank payouts for creators, and real emails for password resets and team invites.

Ad results
Results pulled in from TikTok and Meta automatically, instead of typed in by hand.

Verified channels
Follower counts confirmed with each platform, and audience data used in matching.

Listening
Checking what's said in a video even when the creator hasn't added a script.

Insights
The creative insight screens built from your real results instead of sample data.

Shared shortlists
Contest shortlists your whole team can see and edit together.

Every campaign should make the next video better.

Matching learns from results, the quality check protects your time, and payment stays tied to outcomes — so each round leaves both sides better off than the last.